Greetings Chess Friends,

Please excuse the picture this issue. I've been on sort of an 80's kick lately.

In this issue, we've got some tournament reports from the Colorado Closed and the Bobby Fischer Memorial tournaments. We've got a good follow-up analysis from Bob Rasmussen, who comments on one of the scholastic games from last issue. We've also got Paul Anderson sharing his two losses to Grandmasters in a Dickens' twist (no, not Oliver). Lee Lahti is also sharing another update to the Northern Colorado G/29 Grand Prix events, this time with standings. It's a tight race but still not too late to get on the leader board. And we've got a poem from Anatoly Makarevich that made it into Chess Life for Kids, reprinted here. Check it out; it's pretty cool!

And we've got games. Lots of them. Colorado Closed has closed their report with a few, but we've got games from the Colorado Springs Open, Spring is Sprung (Pueblo), and the Bobby Fischer Memorial. It's nice to see a small uptick in the number of players attending tournaments. Hopefully the trend continues.

We are still looking for someone to take over the Colorado Chess Informant after the next issue (October) is published. We've had some interest, but all potential candidates have since had to withdraw from consideration. Once again, here are qualifications that the ideal candidate should possess:

A qualified candidate for the editorship is knowledgeable in Microsoft Publisher and hopefully other Microsoft products like Excel and Word. They should have access to such software as well. They should have good attention to detail and are willing to proofread others' work. The qualified individual must be able to adhere to strict deadlines and has good discipline to persevere in the face of hardship. A good candidate will have people skills as well and is not afraid to solicit others for articles and games, knowing a good magazine cannot be written in a vacuum.

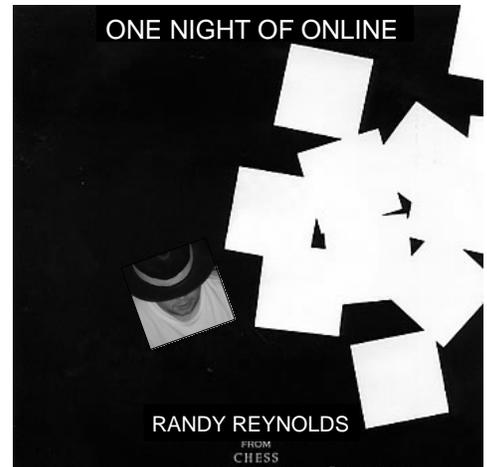

If you are interested in applying for this position, please let me or a CSCA Board member know. We would be most appreciative.

Finally, in an effort to curb online play and get OTB chess back into Colorado, here's the new updated lyrics of Murray Head's "One Night in Bangkok" on page 3 to play us out. (I don't know what that means, "to play us out? What does that mean: "To play us out"?!? "To end the column"?!? All right, go, go...)

We'll do it live!

Enjoy this issue! ☺

[Ed. note: I've got a new-found respect for Tim Rice after trying this... oh well.. Let's do this..]

THE EDITOR:

Colorado, Mountainous setting
And the state don't know that the state is getting
The creme de la creme of the chess world in a
Show with everything but Ben Kingsley

Time flies - doesn't seem a minute
Since the VFW post had the chess boys in it
All change - don't you know that when you
Play in real life there's no ordinary venue

It's Denver... or Fort Collins... or the Springs... or... or this place!

COMPANY:

One night of online and the world's your playground
You'll find your place among the chess e-leet
They'll play a sac that's never bad or unsound
And if you're lucky, your opponent won't cheat
I can feel a hustler sliding up to me

THE EDITOR:

One town's very like another
When your head's down over your pieces, brother

COMPANY:

It's a drag, it's a bore, it's really a downer
To be looking at a board, not staring at a browser

THE EDITOR:

Whaddya mean? Ya seen one congested website...

COMPANY:

Lots of players, young and old,
Automatic scorekeeping and the clock's controlled.

THE EDITOR:

Get frag'd! This is my vocation
Where every move has hand notation
I get my kicks by pushing real wood, sunshine

COMPANY:

One night of online makes a strong man blunder
Mouse slip between despair and ecstasy
One night of online and the tough guys wonder
Can't be too careful with your company
I can see a GM playing against me

THE EDITOR:

Denver's gotta be the witness
To the ultimate test of cerebral fitness
This grips me more than tryin'
Red Hot Pawn with the latest client.

And thank God I'm only watching the game, controlling it

I don't see you guys have brought
The kind of skills live chess has taught
I'd let you watch, I would invite you
But the clocks we use would not excite you

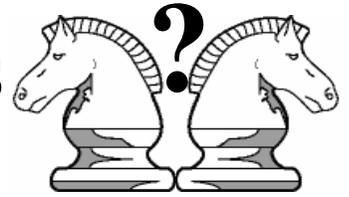

So you better go back to your blogs, your chatrooms, your ICCs

COMPANY:

One night of online makes a strong man blunder
Mouse slip between despair and ecstasy
One night of online and the tough guys wonder
Can't be too careful with your company
I can see a GM playing against me

Colorado Chess, like most chess organizations, has its ups and downs. There are years when participation is high and when it is low. There are many factors for this and the best thing to do is to adjust to those changes and do the best job a person can to provide the best product out there.

The one thing that remains consistent is that state and local organizations in Colorado are run by volunteers. They are you board members and club managers and Tournament Directors (yes, TDs get paid a modest stipend, but is far less than they should be getting.) These individuals week in and week out make sure that the majority place chess when and where they want without too much concern. I can count on less than two hands the number of individuals who make Colorado Chess (and local chess) run.

Unfortunately, these individuals, like you, have other lives and will get burned out. We need to consider helping out. VOLUNTEER. Learn how to run a tournament, become a TD, join you local club's board (or even the state board!) Contribute to the Colorado Chess Informant, or help out with scholastic chess. You could even become the editor of the informant. A commitment of as little as one hour a month can make all the difference!

Chess is an activity that we choose to do. There are many things we could be doing during the week or on weekends, and instead, we choose to play chess. Don't take that opportunity to play chess on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, Thursdays or on the weekends for granted! If you do, someday you may find that opportunity lost.

Sincerely,

Joe Haines
CSCA President

One awesome way to volunteer is to consider being the next Colorado Chess Informant Editor. See the editor's column on page 2 for details!!

Ponomarev Dominates 2008 Colorado Closed

The 2008 Colorado Closed was held on March 14th through 16th at Westwood College's North Denver Campus. This year's format was changed to include only the top six players to accept and invitation and was reduced to only one weekend. The prize fund was also increased from previous year's tournaments. As a result of these changes, this year's field was the strongest in 10 years. It included six of the top eight eligible players in the state including number one, Grandmaster Sharavdorj and number two Master Philipp Ponomarev.

Philipp Ponomarev made a statement in round 1 of the 2008 Colorado Closed Chess tournament when he dominated Grandmaster Sharavdorj with a 27 move win. Philipp continued his dominating performance on Saturday with wins over life master Brian Wall and Randy Canney. With a draw in round four against Renard Anderson, Philipp had a dominating lead.

When GM Sharavdorj and Brian Wall drew in round 4, Philipp was assured of the title. The only question left to decide was who was going to finish in 2nd place. Phillip finished the five round robin tournament with 4.5 points. This should be considered a great feat considering the level of competition in this year's event.

Finishing in second place was GM Sharavdorj with 3.5 points. Randy Canney finished in a very respectable third place, Brian Wall was fourth with 2.0 points. Renard Anderson had possibly the most disappointing weekend, finishing in fifth place with just 1.5 points, his first win not coming until the final round against Brian. Robert Ramirez finished with 1 point.

Herbst Edges Lehti to Grab Scholastic Closed Title

In the scholastic section, it was a two man competition from the start. Both Dylan Lehti and Richard Herbst dominated the competition for four rounds and set up a final round showdown on Sunday afternoon. The final round was a close game that Rich eventually dominated by the middle game and won.

Rounding out the competitors in the scholastic section was Ben Reilly, finishing 3rd with 2.5 points, Jackson Chen with 1.5 points and finishing with one point was David Twerskoi and Aaron Lear.

Overall the event was a great success. Special thanks go to Richard Herbst, President of Westwood College – North Denver Campus, who provided the site for the weekend.

Closed Champion Philipp Ponomarev studies the board.

The Legend -- Memorialized!

The Bobby Fischer Memorial Tournament Report

The Bobby Fischer Memorial chess tournament was played in Manitou Springs on May 3 - 4, 2008. The first prize of $700 in the top section went to GM Dashzeveg Sharavdorj of Denver, who dominated the tournament throughout with true grandmastership. Renard Anderson and Brian Wall followed a point behind at 3-1. The Reserve Section (U1600) went to Cory Foster of Ft. Collins and Michael Dempsey of Loveland, both with 3.5 points. A 14-player non-rated Community Tournament gave out prizes galore, with the first pick going to Marvin Muniz who scored 4-0. Tyler Hughes won a G/10 "Fischer-Random" tournament played Saturday evening.

Bobby Fischer, who died in January, was a chess legend and arguably the greatest player of all time. Developing as a child prodigy in the 1950s, he soared to national championship strength and quickly established himself as a world class player, qualifying for the 1959 Candidates Tournament at the age of 16.

He scored amazing results in tournaments and matches, enough to demonstrate convincingly he was in a class of his own. During the "Fischer Boom" at the time of his winning the World Championship from Boris Spassky, American chess expanded beyond belief. Tournament participation and USCF membership soared to new heights. Chess rode a wave of recognition and respect as the uneducated Brooklyn boy defeated the mighty Soviet Chess Machine. At the tournament, I put up a display of copies of magazine covers from Chess Life and Chess Review from 1956 to 1972 that showed moments in Fischer's wondrous career.

Fischer contributed enormously to our game. He produced scores of brilliant games, both tactical slams and technical delicacies. He also helped build chess professionalism, and made it easier for future champions to earn a good living playing chess. But there was also a darkness in Bobby Fischer that stayed with him all his adult life, and ultimately led to his tragic decline from his greatest triumph. I will not go into details here; chess players know them painfully well. These actions make it difficult to hold Fischer up with respect. But still, considering the totality of the man's life and creations, we felt he deserved this tournament in his memory.

Much credit for this tournament goes to Joe Fromme of Manitou Springs. Joe came to the Colorado Springs Chess Club with the idea for this tournament, and he did the fund-raising to create a first place prize that kept growing in the website tournament notices as the date of the tournament got closer! Joe and I were able to convince the Manitou Springs City Council to let us use the City Hall for half the usual fee. Along with Renae Delaware and Dean Brown, we went around to Manitou Springs businesses collecting prizes for the Community Tournament. Tom Mullikin donated flyers for the tournament, and we used a haunting picture of Fischer drawn by Anthea Carson for a tournament T-shirt. (Contact me if you want to order one.)

On the eve of the tournament, I had a series of computer crises that put my hardware out of action. So Jerry Maier and Dean Brown kindly handled that for me - deeply appreciated! (Jerry will also be directing this year's Pikes Peak Open, as I will have to be at the Renaissance Festival that weekend to close down our booth.) Thanks also go to Renae Delaware for helping run the Community Tournament. and to Art Glassman for being there and helping out in many ways. And, of course, to Joe Fromme (and his patient wife Dena), who provided goodies, ran the display boards, and served as the driving force behind a unique chess experience.

Parting with the Lady

©Reprinted with permission of the author, the United States Chess Federation, and Chess Life Magazine.

Sacrificing the queen is the most beautiful move in chess. Every chess player dreams of playing a game where he parts with his lady to create a master-piece. To safely sacrifice a piece, you should either see a forced checkmate, find a way to regain the sacrificed material, or gain some other type of advantage to justify the sacrifice.

This game set the tone for the final match of the 1998 U.S. Championships between Nick de Firmian and defending champ, Joel Benjamin. De Firmian made a queen sacrifice that I will never forget as I was moving the pieces on the demo board for the audience when he played it!

GM de Firmian

GM Benjamin

Position after 33.Rf1

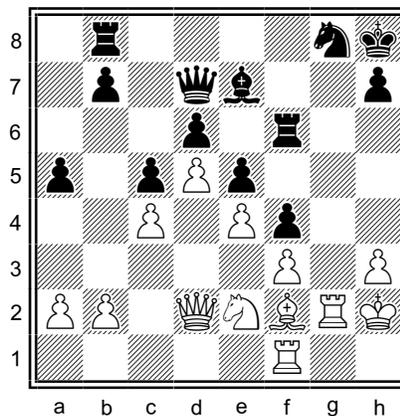

33. ... Qxf1+! 34.Kxf1 Rd1+ 35.Ke2

Re1+ Skewering the king and queen. 36.Kd2 Rxe5 37.Kxc2 Re2+ 38.Resigns

Here is a queen sacrifice from the game that won the Brilliancy Prize in the famous 1953 Zurich International Chess Tournament.

Kotov

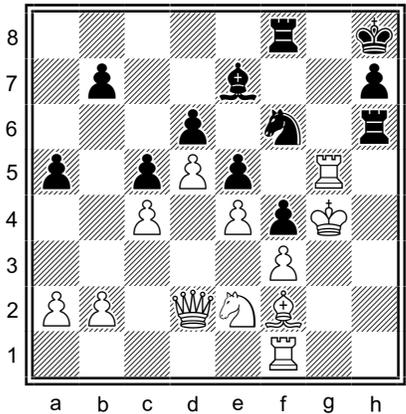

Averbakh

The game is pretty quiet with the center locked up, until Kotov plays the surprising queen sacrifice 30.Qxh3+! White must accept the sacrifice and his king is forced into enemy territory on the wrong side of the pawn wall.

31.Kxh3 Rh6+ 32.Kg4 Nf6+ 33.Kf5 Nd7 34.Rg5 White must defend against 34.Rf8+ 35.Kg4.Rg8+ 36. Kf5 Rf6 mate.

34.Rf8+ 35.Kg4 Nf6+ Kotov is in time pressure and gave some extra checks to get to move 40 and make time control. He is careful not to repeat moves too many times and end up with a three-move repetition draw. Black is dreaming of ways to set up rook-rook roller mates as the White king cannot retreat home to his friends.

36.Kf5 Ng8+ 37.Kg4 Nf6+ 38.Kf5 Nxd5+ 39.Kg4 Nf6+ 40.Kf5 Ng8+ 41.Kg4 Nf6+ 42.Kf5 Ng8+ 43.Kg4 Bxg5 44.Kxg5 Rf7 45.Bh4 Rg6+ 46.Kh5 Rfg7 47.Bg5 Piece by piece, White must give back material to avoid getting mated. 47. ... Rxg5+ 48.Kh4 Nf6 49.Ng3 Rxg3 49.fxg3? 50.Qxg5! giving back the queen for two rooks, resulting in a material advantage for White.

50.Qxd6 R3g6 51.Qb8+ Rg8 52.Resigns 52.Rh6 mate is threatened. 52.Qxg8+ giving back the queen avoids mate, but Black would now have a winning material advantage in the endgame!

Remember, the ultimate sacrifice is your powerful queen and you should either find a forced checkmate or a winning position that justifies giving up your most valuable piece.

Scholastics Under the Microscope

As a lower rated player, I found the following position from the Lasley/Zhou game played at this year's Scholastic Championship to be instructive for several reasons. Those reasons are summed up at the end of this article; however, before you rush to see what they are look at the diagram below.

What move would you make as White, and why? Are you afraid of losing your knight? Have you failed to appreciate the power of your rook on the seventh? Do you feel it's time to set about trading pieces because you have an extra one? If you answered yes to any one of these questions, read on.

Colorado Chess Informant (April 2008)

Xu Zhou

Alexa Lasley

23. Qc4+!

Instead of 23.Qg5, which only keeps the knight's pawn pinned, White makes use of what Nimzovich calls the 7th Rank Absolute by keeping the king relegated to the back rank and under attack.

23. ... Kh8
24. f4!

White is not afraid of ending up in a perpetual check because he sees that his king can reach h4 or in some cases h6 where it will be safe. The important point is to keep up the attack despite the intermediate checks.

24. ... Qe3+

The only viable move for Black's queen. 24...Qb2 runs into 25.c3 and the queen is locked out.

25. Kg2 Qe2+
26. Kg3 Qe3+

Black must continue checking White's king. If 26...Qxd1; 27.Qd4+ with mate to follow. The 7th Rank Absolute forces black to walk a tight rope -- one from which he will eventually fall.

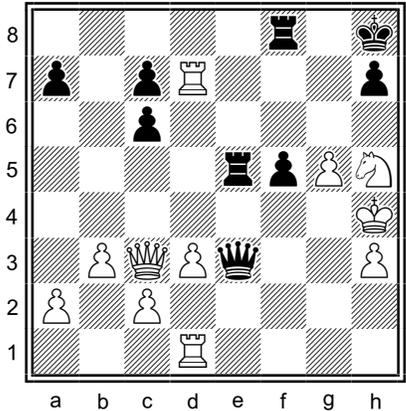

27. Kh4 g5+

A must if Black is to continue fighting on. If 27... Qf2+ then 28.Kg5, Qg2+; 29.Kh6, Qd5 (desperation, but it doesn't help); 30. Qc3+! and White will mate shortly.

28. ffg5 Rbe8

Activating the rook and preparing to block the coming check.

29. Qc3+ Re5 (Diag)

Black's game is hopeless after 29... Qe5; 30.Qxe5+, Rxe5; 31.Nf6 (threatening Rxh7#), Rxf6; 32.gxf6. Either the pawn on f6 will queen or White will mate shortly. For example, 32...Kg8; 33.Rg1+, Kf8; 34.Rg7, Ke8 (34...Re8; 35.Rdf7#); 35.f7+!, Kxd7; 36.f8(Q)+ or 32... h6; 33.Rd8+, Kh7; 34.f7 or 32... Re8, 33.Re1!, Rf8; 34.R1e7, Rb8; 35.Rxh7+, Kg8; 36.Rdg7+, Kf8; 37.Rh8#.

30. Rg1

There are other moves, but this is the safest because the rook can interpose on g3 if Black checks on f2, thus leaving the h5 knight for both attack and defense. Obviously 30... Qxg1 is answered by 31.Qxe5+ with mate to follow.

30. ... f4

If Black tries to protect the overburdened rook a second time by 30... Re8 there follows 31.Nf6, R8e7; 32.Rxe7, Qf2+ (before capturing the rook, Black wants his queen on a square where White's knight cannot attack it with the coming discovered check); 33.Kh5, Qf3+; 34.Kh6, Rxe7; 35.Re1! (keep your eyes on the prize). Black's defense is at an end because his rook must stay put and White threatens a nasty discovered check.

However, it's not as easy as it looks. Because White's king is more exposed with the knight at f6, there are ways for him to go wrong even with a threatened mate in one. For instance, 31...Qf2+; 32.Kh5, Qf3+; 33.Kh6?!, Qxh3+; 34.Nh5, Re6+; 35.g6, Qe3+; 36.Nf4 (if 36.Rg5, Rxg6#) Qxf4+; 37.Kh5, hxg+; 38.Rxg6, Qh2+; 39.Kg5, Qg3+; 40.Kh5, 41.Qxg6+, Kh4; 42.Qg4#.

Of course, all this can be avoided if White uses his defensive rook properly. For instance, 31...Qf2+; 32.Rg3, Qf4+; 33.Rg4!, Qf2+; 34.Kh5 (now the king is safe), R8e7; 35.Qxe5! with mate to follow shortly.

- 31. Re7 Qf2+
- 32. Rg3

The rook is better placed here than the knight, which in its current position controls f4. This was the reason for 30.Rg1.

32 ... Qe1 (Diagram)

Maybe White will bite and exchange queens. Besides, it's Black's only chance, but not a very good one. You may notice that after the exchange of queens by 33.Qxe1, Rxe1; 34.Rxe1, fxg3 White still comes out a piece ahead, but Black can play on for awhile. The text move keeps up the tension and puts an end to any counterplay by Black.

- 33. Qb2! Kg8

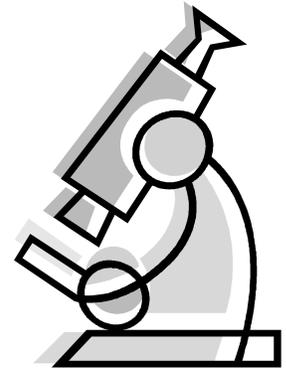

Black can resign here but waits until the smoke clears.

- 34. Rxe5 Qxg3+

What else is there?

- 35. Nxg3 fxg3
- 36. Re7 Rf7
- 37. Re8+ Rf8
- 38. Qe5

Now Black can resign.

PRINCIPLES OF THIS LESSON

Don't fear your opponent's threat to take a piece (i.e. the knight on h5 by the pawn on g6 once the pin is broken) if you can attack successfully (i.e. 23.Qc4+).

Make use of your rook on the opponent's seventh rank (i.e. 7th rank absolute where the opponent's king is confined to the first rank) in conjunction with other pieces (i.e. queen on c3 or c4 and knight on h5).

If you have an extra piece (i.e. the knight on h5) there are times to use it for attack and not trade down to an endgame.

Learn to make use of pieces for offense and defense concurrently (i.e. the knight on h5).

Don't fear checks in the middle of an attack if you can see that your king will end up safely (i.e. 24.f4! becomes a good move and 24...Qe3+ just a temporary nuisance).

Learn patience during an attack, and don't settle for an extra piece if there is something better (i.e. 33.Qb2! instead of 33.Qxe1)

Poems 'bout chess

by Anatoly Makarevich

Anatoly's note: You might want to read the poem(s) as a whole, read the black part only, and then read the white (and colorful) part only.

To Beth Struble, who taught me to love poetry, to Paul Szeligowski, who taught me to love chess, and to my parents, who always encourage me. --AM

The board,

The pieces.

It's as Black and White as that

The Knight, the bishop,

The rook, the pawn,

It's as Black and White as that.

The king, the queen,

Strategy, tactics,

It's as Black and White as that.

The Sicilian,

The English,

It's as Black and White as that.

The blunders,

The sacs,

It's as Black and White as that.

The Pirc,

The French,

It's as Black and White as that.

Losses,

Wins,

It's as Black and White as that.

It's all chess.

Chess.

It's as colorful as that.

The checkered board.

It's as Black and White as that

The curvy Knight,

The pointy Bishop,

The stable Rook,

The small, fat Pawn,

The wise, wise King,

The wonderful Queen,

It's as Black and White as that.

The hard Strategy,

The openings,

The hard-fought English,

The classic Sicilian,

The nasty Pirc,

The blockade French,

It's as Black and White as that.

The tricky Tactics,

The horrible blunders,

The beautiful sacs,

It's as Black and White as that.

The sad, sad losses,

The good, happy wins,

It's as Black and White as that.

It's all chess.

The wonderful game.

Chess.

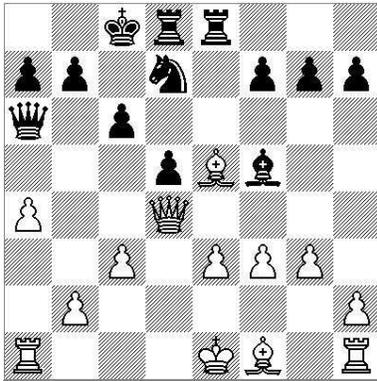

The never-ending game.

It's as colorful as that.

Tactics Time answers:

If you have a position from a game played in Colorado with an interesting tactic please send it to me! It can be anything from a mate in one to a deep combination that only you and Deep Blue could have possibly figured out! TimmyBx@aol.com

- During his lesson on how to play against the "Walrus" in The People's Republic of Boulder, Ken attacked Brian's Queen with 1. e3. Brian ignores this, and plays the in between move 1. ..Nxe5! threatening the king and queen fork with Nf3+. Black wins a piece.
- Shaun did a cool Bxh7 Bishop sac a few moves earlier. The only way for black to survive was to bring his king out to defend itself just like Macaulay Culkin did in Home Alone. "Keep the change you filthy animal!!!" After 1. Qh5 it's over. For example 1...Qxg5 2.hxg5 f6 3 g6 fxe5 4.Qh7#
- During this game the staff at Poor Richards was serving coffee, and Josh was serving PAIN! 1.Re8+ Kg7 2.Re1 (clearance, double attack theme—threatening the knight fork Ne8+) Kg6 3.Rxb1 wins a piece.
- The shortest path to victory is 1. ..Nc6 followed by 2. ..R7d4# Be sure and join Paul's excellent newsletter at http://games.groups.yahoo.com/group/cs_chess/ if you haven't already.
- The "Dean" of Colorado Chess took a timeout from playing 100 games at one time on Red-HotPawn.com to unleash a mate in 7 with 1.Rxe7+ Rf7 2.Rxf7+ Kh6 3.Rxh7+ Kg5 4.h4+ Kf5 5.Qf2+ Rf3 6.Qxf3+ Ke5 7.Qf4#
- To err is human, to win a queen, "Divine". After 1. b3 Anthea does not have time to save her queen, and stop the mating net after 2. Qf6. Check out funny and educational videos of Anthea at www.youtube.com/TimmyBx teaching openings from her book "How to Play Chess like an Animal", now available at a Borders bookstore near you, or chesslikeananimal.com.
- Kathy's opponent screamed "Don't taze me bro" after 1. Qd7+ Kf8 2. Nh7+ Kg8 3. Qf7#
- 1. ..Qb4 protects the dangerous criminal passed pawn on b2 and threatens Re1+. White's best defense is 2. c3 Qxc3 3. Bxd5+ Nxd5 4. Qxc3 Nxc3 5. Rxb2 and white is down a piece. This game was a long battle that eventually ended in a draw.
- 1. ..d3 causes a lot of problems for white, who has fallen behind in development, and faces a killer bishop pair. Pete later won this game, scoring a 300+ pt upset after black got too creative in the endgame. It's not over til the fat lady sings!

G/29 Grand Prix Update

The 2008 G/29 Grand Prix is approaching the halfway point, with 5 events currently completed. The June event in Cheyenne will be completed before this edition of the Informant comes out – just too late for the results to be included.

Fort Collins hosted its 2nd event of the 2008 Grand Prix in April, in conjunction with a silent auction fundraiser for the CSCA Denker and Polgar representatives. The turnout was strong, but not as large as the 1st event hosted by Fort Collins – with 16 players participating (including 6 newcomers). Grand Prix newcomers Brad Lundstrom and Zachary Bekkedahl, both playing in their first tournaments in over a year, were the only players to go unscathed and finished the event tied for 1st with perfect scores of 3 out of 3. Newcomer Daniel de Vries, and Grand Prix veterans Markus Petters, Cory Foster, Gannon White, and Gary Dorsey each finished tied for 2nd with 2 out of 3. And through the silent auction and donations of the players and the Fort Collins Chess Club, we raised $50 for the Denker and Polgar funds.

Boulder joined Fort Collins, Greeley, and Cheyenne as Grand Prix hosts, by running the May G/29 event. I'm not sure if it was bad timing with classes at CU having finished the week before or hosting the event the Wednesday after Memorial Day, but the turnout for the Boulder event was our lowest yet – only 12 players. However, by hosting the event in Boulder it did allow 6 of the Boulder club regulars to participate in their first Grand Prix event. Even with the smaller turnout, the competition was just as fierce with several evenly match opponents and several draw results. A full 75% of the players finished with even or better scores. In the end, Top-seeded David Bowers became only the 2nd player to win a G/29 Grand Prix event outright! Chris Wall, Klaus Johnson, Gannon White and I finished with 2 out of 3.

Players earn Grand Prix points for both participation and performance in G/29 Grand Prix events. A player can earn a maximum of 4 points per tournament (finishing with 3 wins and earning the 1-point participation bonus). After 5 events we have a new overall leader – Gannon White with 15 points. Randy Reynolds is still near the top of the standings, in second place overall with 12.5 points. I am following just behind Randy in third place overall with 12 points. The next several positions are closely contested, with many players with 5-9.5 points in a tight pack just behind the leaders.

A total of 41 different players have participated in at least one of the five events held so far. Hopefully this number continues to increase as the G/29 Grand Prix moves into its second half. The Greeley Chess Club is hosting the next event on Tuesday, July 22nd, with the Boulder Chess Club hosting August event on Wednesday, August 27th.

Keep an eye on the Informant and the colorado-chess.com and wyoming-chess.com websites for more information about the G/29 Grand Prix, including our upcoming tournament schedule. If you have any questions about the G/29 Grand Prix, please contact me by e-mail at lee.lahti@comcast.net or by phone at 970-372-8590.

A Tale of Two Grandmasters

It was the best of games. It was the worst of games. I have now played two Grandmasters. One was at the beginning of my recorded chess career. One was at the Bobby Fischer Memorial, 22 years later.

It was the notation of wisdom. It was the notation of foolishness. By the time I played in the Bobby Fischer Memorial, I had mastered algebraic notation. I know some people have a great deal of anxiety towards mathematics and just the sound of algebraic notation sends them running from the chessboard. However, my 5 semesters of engineering and logical mind provided me with enough confidence that I could master 8 letters and 8 numbers to determine the position of a point, line, curve, plane, pawn, knight, bishop, rook, queen, or king in a space of a given dimension with respect to a system of lines or other fixed references. How simple. Of course, by this time I had experience recording each move in a legible fashion for 453 games. My main problem is getting the right move in the right box on the score sheet, but in my most recent game against a GM, I must say I was at or near the best recording I have ever done. However, my first game against a GM was also my first recorded game ever. The only preparation I did for the game was trying to figure out how to write the moves. Unfortunately, I picked up my father's childhood chess books and learned that English notation was the most popular system in the US back in the 50's. Who knew it had changed by 1986? I did fine with the moves, but I have no idea what I was thinking on some of the annotations. I put an arrow on my move 17, and I assume I did not mean "with attack". Hopefully, I confused the GM and made him think there was more there than just a bad move, like the time I had an opponent who thought check was notated with an exclamation point. I was confused as to why he thought bringing his queen out early was such a good move as it lead to a series of exclamation points for me, ending in a double exclamation point (if you know what I mean)!!

It was the epoch of adjournment. It was the epoch of time delay. My first experience playing a GM was un-timed, as it occurred during a simultaneous exhibition. Of course, there was a limit to the amount of time I had to think about each move, but it varied depending upon how long the GM took to make his way around all the other boards. In my second experience playing a GM, the time control was game in 2 hours (G/2). The first day of the tournament, I had adjusted my clock until 1:20 showed in the display. However, the first game ended so quickly time was never an issue. The second game lasted almost the entire 4 hours. Since the GM was late the next day, I set up my clock at the board. When he finally showed up, he had little trouble making up the time he had lost, and soon I was falling behind. As I looked at the clock, I realized our game was much further along than anyone else's game. How could this be? I played for 4 hours yesterday, but this game looks like it couldn't even last 3 hours. An hour and 20 minutes had just vanished into thin air like an airplane in a David Copperfield trick. Suddenly, it occurred to me that I never used my clock yesterday. I had used my opponent's clock in both games, and now I just had put a clock on my game with the GM at 1 hour and 20 minutes not 120 minutes. Both of us were short 40 minutes. So, I approached the TD about the situation, apologized to the GM, stopped the clocks, and added the additional time. It turns out I was the one who needed the extra time as my final moves were played in blitz mode with the GM having ample time to methodically mop up the last of my hopes for a draw.

It was the season of White. It was the season of Blackness. By the time of the Bobby Fischer Memorial, I was the proud owner of my own tournament chess set. It came in handy, as my game against the GM was the first round of the final day, and the GM had not shown up. As I unpacked my canvas, custom-created, chess carrying case and unrolled my vinyl green and buff chessboard, I set up my high-quality, black & ivory, weighted plastic chess pieces including the 4 inch king. Since I was white, I pushed my pawn to e4 and began fantasizing about the possibility of beating a GM in one move. I only had an hour to wait. However, in my first attempt against a GM I did not have the benefit of such fine equipment. I did not even own my own chess set. I had to grab the cardboard box with the torn corners that held the slab of cardboard folded in half and the miniscule pieces that tended to fly away if anyone turned on the air conditioning with the ½ inch king as I headed out the door to the simultaneous exhibition. Of course, as is the custom, all challengers had to play as black against the GM, which wasn't much of a handicap for me as I was equally bad on both sides of the board at this point in my chess career.

We had everyone around us. We had no one around us. My first experience playing a GM was as part of a large group of chess players taking on the GM all at the same time. I had very little experience playing chess prior to this event as, after learning the moves, I found myself in the wide chasm between being able to beat my older sister and not being able to beat my dad. However, any invitation to be included in one of my dad's activities was met with great expectations. Plus, my lack of experience would certainly be hidden in the crowd of people who had turned out for the event. I happily chose a seat next to my dad, I tried to survive as long as he did, and we resigned on the same move. In my second experience playing a GM, it was a tournament game with myself facing the GM head to head. This time I had no place to hide. I was alone on an island, called board 1. To make matters worse, Joe Fromme set up a demonstration board on the stage behind us and played out each move as we made them. Now, even the laziest of chess players could have seen all my embarrassing blunders without even leaving their seats.

It was the opening of hope. It was the end-game of despair. By the time of the Bobby Fischer Memorial, I had a better understanding of the opening moves of chess. I had gotten twice as far into the book as I did the first time out, and when I departed from the book, it was deliberate. I can't say it was the best plan, but I found myself in a common battle of life trying to decide between playing it safe or taking a risk. Unfortunately, I never really resolved the conflict in my mind and continued to switch between the options on alternating moves. I thought, "Yes, I will attack and annihilate him, before he does the same to me." So I pushed the h pawn. But then I thought, "No, wait, wasn't it Rommel who said that? Didn't he lose? I should castle kingside and away from these advancing pawns." So I pushed the g pawn. Finally, I thought, "It's better to burn out than fade away!" So, I sent my forces running through the forest silently chanting, "Gunterer glieben glauen glouben!"

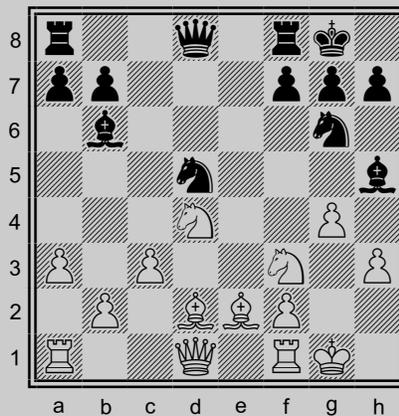

We were all going direct to Heaven, we were all going direct the other way – in short, the simultaneous exhibition was so far like the present game, that some of its noisiest authorities insisted on its being received, for good or for evil, in the superlative degree of comparison only. So, as I reflect back on these two games against Grandmasters, I realize there are really only two things I can truly say I learned from this experience:

Bisguier is spelled with a "G" not a "Q" like I originally thought, and it is a far, far better game that I played, than I have ever played; it is a far, far better rest I go to until the next time I play a Grandmaster.
